Believe Maui Won Fairly

The following letter to the Maui News explains itself:

Sir: Maui people, who understand the game of polo, were very much surprised at the decision of the umpire in the polo game of September 2, that Maui lost the last goal by 1-5th of a second.

Our private advices are that the goal keeper said the goal was made before the gong sounded, and a member of the Oahu team said that the sentiment was quite general that Maui should have been declared the winner.

Even if there was good grounds for the belief that the goal was not made by 1-5th of a second, this is bringing timekeeping in polo down to a fine point.

The agreement between the Oahu and Maui teams was that they should play four ten-minute periods, actual play. Time lost in various ways, such as time lost after a goal is made in getting back to the middle of the field, "ball out of bounds," time lost by accidents, etc., to be allowed for, so that there would be 10 minutes actual play in each period.

The timekeepers are placed outside the field, 300 feet long by 450 feet wide, and it is impossible for them to tell either by their own observation, or from signals from the linesmen, or goal keepers, just exactly what time is lost, to the fraction of a second, and it is equally impossible for them to ascertain, to the fraction of a second, when a goal is made several hundred feet away from them.

Owing to the difficulties of being perfectly accurate, a little liberality has always been allowed in timing the goal. It is not figured down to 1-5th of a second, and in cases like the one that occurred in the Oahu tournament, the goal would be allowed.

Time keeping in polo can not be brought down to the strict rules of the race track, where it is an easy matter to keep time to the fraction of a second.

I would mention incidentally that Oahu really made themselves only 3-4 goals, instead of 4 3-4. One of the Maui men gave the ball a backhand, which unfortunately for Maui, struck one of the horses' legs, and glanced through the goal, thus giving Oahu a goal under the rules, though it was struck by a Maui man.

We feel strongly that the umpire was wrong in his decision, and that Maui fairly won the game of September 2.
